The FTSE IDFC India Infrastructure Index Series utilises FTSE's definitive global classification standard – Industry Classification Benchmark (ICB) – to classify Indian infrastructure securities accurately. The transparent and comprehensive classification system enables categorisation of individual securities across four levels of granularity: Industry, Supersectors, Sectors and Subsectors and covers a universe of 75,000 stocks worldwide, including India, in one single data source.

The series is reviewed semi-annually in accordance with the index ground rules which ensure that both the tradable FTSE IDFC India Infrastructure 30 Index and the benchmark version (FTSE IDFC India Infrastructure Index) continue to represent accurately the investable universe which is the basis of index-linked products, such as funds, structured products and Exchange Traded Funds (ETFs). PTC India Limited will be included in the FTSE IDFC India Infrastructure Index.

All constituent changes take effect at the start of business on 24 September 2012 and the next review will take place on 8 March 2013.
